DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
 - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 2. Claims 22-23 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sinks [Pat. No. 1,054,321] in view of Lang et al [Pat. No. 5,039,535]. Sinks teaches a method of cooking with device comprising a circular, horizontal, rotatable food support with a central axis of rotation (Figure 1, #8), rotating the food support through a heating chamber multiple times (page 1, lines 73-76), the heating chamber having upper and lower housings which do not extend past the food support (Figure 1, #1); heating members (Figure 2, #2), and the food support being removable (page 1, lines 54-57). Sinks does not recite cooking pizza placed on top of the axis of rotation. Lang et al teach a method of cooking pizza on a rotatable support with the pizza placed over the axis of rotation (column 8, line 57; column 6, line 57; Figure 1, #38). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to incorporate the pizza cooking of Lang et al into the invention of Sinks since both are directed to methods of cooking, since Sinks already included a rotatable food support (Figure 1, #8), since pizza was a popular food item which was commonly cooked on rotatable supports as shown by Lang et al, and since Lang et al also included intermittently passing a portion of the pizza by a heating member (Figure 7, #60).

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed August 25, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

In response to applicant's arguments against the references individually, one cannot show nonobviousness by attacking references individually where the rejections are based on combinations of references. See In re Keller, 642 F.2d 413, 208 USPQ 871 (CCPA 1981); In re Merck & Co., 800 F.2d 1091, 231 USPQ 375 (Fed. Cir. 1986).

In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992). In this case, Sinks is directed to a rotatable cooking device with partial housings, while Lang et al is directed to a rotatable cooking device which cooks pizza which has been placed on the rotatable surface. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to incorporate the pizza cooking of Lang et al into the invention of Sinks since both are directed to methods of cooking, since Sinks already included a rotatable food support (Figure 1, 8), since pizza was a popular food item which was commonly cooked on rotatable supports as shown by Lang et al, and since Lang et al also included intermittently passing a portion of the pizza by a heating member (Figure 7, #60).

Applicants argue that it would have been impossible to cook pizza "due to the presence of a central spindle 4 projecting above the grill 8". However, the present rejection relies upon Sinks in view of Lang et al. Lang et al expressly teach that it was known to cook pizza on a rotatable surface without the need for a spindle extending from the top surface (Figure 1, #38).

In response to applicant's argument that the examiner's conclusion of obviousness is based upon improper hindsight reasoning, it must be recognized that any judgment on obviousness is in a sense necessarily a reconstruction based upon hindsight reasoning. But so long as it takes into account only knowledge which was within the level of ordinary skill at the time the claimed invention was made, and does not include knowledge gleaned only from the applicant's disclosure, such a reconstruction is proper. See In re McLaughlin, 443 F.2d 1392, 170 USPQ 209 (CCPA 1971).

In response to applicant's argument that the references fail to show certain features of applicant's invention, it is noted that the features upon which applicant relies (i.e., an appliance smaller than a pizza) are not recited in the rejected claim(s). Although the claims are interpreted in light of the specification, limitations from the specification are not read into the claims. See In re Van Geuns, 988 F.2d 1181, 26 USPQ2d 1057 (Fed. Cir. 1993).
